

OXFORD, N. C., Sept. 1.—Mrs. Spencer Currin, who lives on the Dancy farm near Oxford, was badly bitten on her right hand by a highland moccasin snake on Saturday. She was outdoors at the time and in the afternoon when she crawled down in a nest and the snake bit her four times before she reached it. It was not the old hen-pocking bee. There were 13 young snakes in the nest and the old snake was protecting the young. Mrs. Currin was desperately ill for several days but is now recovering.

Coal Legislation
Before Congress

WASHINGTON, Aug. 31.—The administration bill for control and distribution of coal during the mining and transportation emergency was passed today by the House 214 to 16 and sent to the Senate with assurances of early consideration. Only one change was made in the measure as originally framed, an amendment by Representative Sanders, Republican, Indiana, providing that the life of the law should end January 1, 1934, or a few weeks after the first regular session of the next Congress, being passed 122 to 77.

In the Senate, as soon as the soldiers' bonus bill had been disposed of, attention was turned to coal legislation. The Borah substitute for the House bill passed last week creating a fact-finding commission being taken up. Two hours of debate, however, showed the impossibility of action on the measure today and it went over for further consideration tomorrow.

The big fight of the day in the House was in the section of the control and distribution measure which gave the president the right, after issuance of a presidential proclamation declaring the present emergency no longer in existence, to proclaim the existence of another such emergency, without asking leave of Congress. The section was voted out in committee of the whole, 85 to 65, but when the bill, as finally completed, was put before the House proper, Chairman Winslow, of the interstate commerce committee, in charge of it, demanded and obtained a record vote, and the section was retained, 131 to 124.

Representative Rayburn of Texas, Democratic member of the interstate commerce committee, offered the motion to strike it out, and he was supported by Chairman Madden of the appropriations committee, Representative Graham, Republican, Pennsylvania, and some leaders of both parties. Previously Mr. Winslow had sought to amend the provision so as to give Congress the right to say if an emergency prevailed in the coal mining and railroad world, but his motion to this effect was defeated through the votes of members who were confident the entire section would go out.

Mr. Rayburn's motion to recommit for the purpose of eliminating the clause "to prevent extortion in prices charged for coal and other fuel and promote the general welfare" was rejected without a record vote. Three Republicans from West Virginia, Goodykoontz, Woodyard and Rosenbloom, opposed the bill. Mr. Goodykoontz declaring that in the House debate operators had been "castigated," while no strong voice was lifted against profiteering retailers. Asserting that the measure would not afford relief, he told the House the people had asked for bread and Congress had given them a stone. Mr. Woodyard characterized the legislation as socialistic and declared the "same cure-all legislation" might be demanded by those concerned with other industries than coal.

The Senate discussion developed more into exchanges of opinions as to the causes and possible consequences of the present rail and coal situation than of the Borah bill. It brought also from Senator Frelinghuysen, Republican, New Jersey, a statement that had the Senate acted on bills which he introduced two years ago and a year ago and which he claimed were designed to serve the same purpose as the present proposal, the present emergency could have been averted.

Senator Frelinghuysen said he believed the Borah bill should pass because of a conviction that conditions similar to those now before the country would have to be faced next spring. He argued, however, that the fact-finding commission should be made a permanent government tribunal and not be limited to one investigation.

The New Jersey senator declared that many large coal companies had been guilty of taking extortionate and outrageous prices and that a long list of dividends voted by several of them, he said, were public property and had been compiled and published by well-known publishers.

People in New York City live like bees in a hive, ants in a hill. You'd think that everyone would know all about their neighbors. But they don't. And don't care to. Above is Dominic Albino. NO TRACE OF
MOONS BODY
FOUND SO FAR

RICHMOND, Aug. 31.—Friends of Edward H. Moon, the missing Richmond business man who is alleged to have fallen overboard from the steamer Jefferson en route to Norfolk from New York, have returned to the city from Norfolk. Cutters and other vessels have been run over the course of the vessel seeking to locate the body and flying machines have been going out far to get a view of the body if it is afloat. The men report that nothing whatever has been ascertained, save that the belief is that the man, attacked with seasickness, went out on deck at an early hour, losing his balance when the steamer lurched in the storm and that he fell overboard. There appears to be no foundation for the report that Mr. Moon was financially involved.

OPPOSE CHANGE IN HIGHWAY

WINCHESTER, Va., Aug. 31.—Opposition to diverting the Robert E. Lee Memorial Highway from its original route from New York to New Orleans, to make it run westward from Chattanooga, Tenn., was expressed in resolutions unanimously adopted today by the Grand Camp of Virginia Confederate Veterans in session here. A route, it was contended, "would be going away from the heart of the south" and would "deplete it of the opportunity to honor General Lee's memory." Virginia senators and representatives and Governor Trimble were asked to work for establishment of the New Orleans route.

NO DESERTIONS
FROM THE RANK

RICHMOND, Va., Aug. 31.—The railroads hereabouts are claiming that the men who struck July 1, are returning in large numbers, but the fact is that the roads are advertising for men every day. Union officials declare that they have kept tabs on one road, the Chesapeake and Ohio, and that of the 4,277 that quit only twenty-one have deserted the ranks of the workers. This is less than one-third of one per cent. Officers of the union say that on other railroads their men are holding well.

Labor To Fight Sweeping Order

Retaliation to Injunction Issued at Chicago Expected—Federation of Labor Called to Meet September 9th.

(By the Associated Press.)

CHICAGO, Sept. 2.—Under restrictions placed upon them by the Federal government by means of the most drastic, and far-reaching temporary injunction ever issued, in an industrial crisis, railway shopmen who walked out July 1st in a protest against conditions prescribed by the United States Labor Board, today entered a new era of the nation-wide rail strike.

The executive council of the American Federation of Labor prepared to meet September 9th. Samuel Gompers said communications from labor organizations requiring the federation to be sponsor for a general strike in sympathy with the shopmen would be placed before the council "as a matter of routine business."

INJUNCTION ISSUED IN CHICAGO

CHICAGO, Sept. 1.—(Associated Press.)—Taking one of the most drastic steps ever attempted in a strike situation, the United States government today obtained a temporary federal order restraining striking railroad shopmen, their officers and affiliated bodies throughout the country from interfering in any way whatever with the operation of the railroads.

The restraining order, hearing on which was set for September 11, was issued by Federal Judge James H. Wilkerson, upon the petition of Attorney General Harry M. Daugherty, who came here from Washington to argue for the action.

The order enjoins, until the hearing, all railway employees, attorneys, servants, agents, associates and all persons acting in aid or in conjunction with them, from, in any manner, interfering with, hindering or obstructing railway companies, their agents, servants or employees in the operation of their respective railroads and systems of transportation or the performance of their public duties and obligations in the transportation of passengers and property in interstate commerce and the carriage of the mails and from in any manner interfering with employees engaged in inspection, repair, operation and use of trains, locomotives, cars and other equipment and from attempting to prevent any person from freely entering into or continuing in the employ of the companies for the purpose of inspection, and repairing of locomotives and cars or otherwise.

The underlying principle involved in the action, the attorney general said in concluding his argument for the order, "the survival and the supremacy of the government of the United States." Declaring his request was not aimed at union labor, the attorney general said that the step was necessary to the preservation of the unions themselves. As the government expected to use its authority to prevent the labor unions from destroying the open shop, "When the unions claim the right to dictate to the government and to dominate the American people and deprive the American people of the necessities of life," he warned, "then the government will destroy the unions for the government of the United States is supreme and must endure."

Benjamins Silent; House to Be Let

Long Fight Against Will to be Prepared at Meeting of of Disinherited Children—Housekeeper Holds Fast.

NEW YORK, Sept. 2.—All the principals in the controversy arising out of Park Benjamin's action in cutting off his children in his will with $1 each maintained complete silence yesterday. Until the Benjamin children, including Mrs. Caruso, who is in Italy, get together and formulate a plan of campaign, no further revelations are expected of the dissensions that caused Mr. Benjamin to turn so bitterly against his children and leave the bulk of his property to his adopted daughter, Miss Anna Bolchi Benjamin.

Park Benjamin Jr., spokesman for the Benjamin children, has stated that he did not know when their conference would take place. He has said they might wait until the arrival of Mrs. Caruso, late in October.

Miss Anna Bolchi Benjamin, who is at the house at Shippan Point, Conn., which Mr. Benjamin leased from Enos Wilder, Jr., for the summer, refused to be interviewed yesterday, sending word to the "would not see anybody at present."

Expect Hearing In Cook's Case

More than sixty cases are expected to appear on the docket of the September term of the corporation court set together and formulate a plan of campaign, no further revelations are expected of the dissensions that caused Mr. Benjamin to turn so bitterly against his children and leave the bulk of his property to his adopted daughter, Miss Anna Bolchi Benjamin.

To Bring Out the Tanks On Monday

The local fleet of tanks which for six or more months have been immured in the armory because of the damage which the city engineer felt would be done to the city streets if they operated over them, will be brought out for the first time on Monday, Labor Day, when the Tank Company proposes to do some maneuvering. The machines will be taken over the concrete bridge to Arnett's place on reservoir hill where they will be closed up and citizens given an opportunity to see them driven by signals. About fifty men will take part in the maneuvers under Lieutenants H. E. Hayes and J. F. Davis. The tanks expect to leave the armory at noon.

Striker, Brooding, Shoots Himself

RICHMOND, Va., Sept. 2.—Out of employment and brooding over financial difficulties, Emmett M. Phelps, 31 years old, 1834 Vendible street, attempted to take his own life Wednesday afternoon by firing a .32-calibre bullet into his right breast, his wife, Mrs. Beattie Phelps, said today. Phelps is at the Memorial hospital and physicians today stated his condition is slightly worse. Recovery is regarded as improbable.

Phelps had been employed in the Richmond shops of the Southern railway for the last 12 years, but joined the other shopmen in going on strike July 1. Since that time, Mrs. Phelps said, her husband's savings had dwindled until the family was facing destitution. Phelps was unable to pay his bills and was being hard pressed by some of his creditors. Mrs. Phelps said she did everything she could to cheer her husband, but he gradually became more and more depressed.

Friday he secured employment with a meat-packing concern, Mrs. Phelps said, but the salary was so meagre that her husband came home at dinner time Wednesday and said he had quit his employment. He refused to eat dinner, she said, and retired to the bedroom. At 3 o'clock he came downstairs and into the dining room, where she and their three small children were seated. Phelps, his wife said, told the oldest child, a boy of seven years, to go out on the porch, and, turning to her, said: "I am going to kill myself."

Mrs. Phelps said she jumped out of the chair but before she could reach her husband he had fired the pistol. The bullet lodged under the right lung and the wounded man fell to the floor. The police were notified and Phelps was taken to the hospital in the city ambulance.

Phelps came to Richmond from Clifton Forge, where two of his sisters now live. A third sister lives in Washington and a brother, a Rev. George Phelps, pastor of a Baptist church, lives at Garber, Tenn. His parents are dead. Besides George, the oldest child, Phelps has two other children, Robert, 4, and Emmett M. Jr., two years old.

Prior to the railway strike the family lived on 18 holes. The card game was Mrs. Phelps' hobby, and he did all in his power for her and the children. He was cheerful when in normal condition and did not drink, nor was he addicted to any other bad habit, she said.

At the hospital yesterday Phelps told his wife he regretted his act and hoped he would recover. Mrs. Phelps, whose mother and father are both dead, is now at the home of her aunt, Mrs. Walden, 2013 East Broad street. Phelps is entirely without funds. The youngest child is ill in bed and under the care of a physician.

Golf Tourney Here Next Week

The crowning event of the golf season of the Danville Golf Club will take place in the annual tournament for the president's cup. The cup was donated by John H. Schofield, Jr., president of the club, who has done much in promoting good golf in Danville.

Beginning Monday and lasting until Saturday the members will qualify in medal play for 18 holes. The card will be turned in for the first 18 holes played next week. The committee has decided that no score over 98 may play for match play. Match play will begin Monday, September 11th and pairings will be posted on the bulletin board in the locker room at the Golf Club next Saturday.

Match play will be conducted on a handicap basis, the handicap being two-thirds of the club handicap. A revised list of handicaps will be posted on the bulletin board on Monday morning. The finals in match play will be over 36 holes and the successful competitor will have won the highest honor in the Golf Club for the season.

The president and his committee have done everything in their power to make the season a success, and the tournament committee hopes that as many members as possible can play their qualifying round and turn in their cards, promising the showing of appreciation of the efforts of the tournament officials.

Under the guidance of Bob Hayes, the course has greatly improved and a good test of golf is assured.

Lawyer's Acts In Baltimore Hold-Up Case Is Revealed

BALTIMORE, Sept. 1.—How deeply Baltimore has been stirred by the Hicks, Tase & Norris Company paying $100,000 for the release of a man who was arrested in connection with the Baltimore hold-up case, is revealed by the fact that the company has been busy themselves with different phases of the case.

Steps looking toward the disbarment of Harry B. Wolf, criminal lawyer, if charges against him are proved, were taken by the Baltimore Bar Association. Mr. Wolf is the man who, it is said, entertained Walter Socolow, wanted as the actual slayer of William B. Norris, at his home a week ago last Wednesday. His connection with the case will be investigated by the grievance committee of the association.

Charges made by Eugene O'Donne, former assistant State's Attorney, that judges can be reached through the back of the head, will be investigated by the executive committee of the bar association, at a special meeting at four o'clock this afternoon.

Gather Investigating Levee.

Charles D. Gathier, Police Commissioner, said he had not yet satisfied himself as to the connection of Capt. James M. Levee with the case. Captain Levee's second report was filed day before yesterday. But Mr. Gathier will go still further into this matter.

Judge James P. Gorter, chief judge of the Criminal Court, yesterday announced that because crime is flourishing in Baltimore, "the time has come for giving long terms in prison, without consideration for anybody."

The matter is now in the hands of the grievance committee, which will be before the court after time.

A committee was named yesterday by Frederick W. Wood, president of the Board of Trade, to handle the Gorter case. The committee will be made up of representatives of the business community.

Meanwhile the hunt for Socolow and "Jack" Hart, alleged to have been two of the hold-up men, through a mysterious stranger, a man dressed in overalls stained with brick dust and clay, the police have learned more about the movements of the fugitives here in Baltimore, previous to the visit they are said to have been made to Mr. Wolf's home. It is said also that several new clues are being developed.

Mr. Wolf was the subject of sharp comment yesterday by Edgar Allan Poe, president of the Bar Association. "In my opinion, if the stories printed in the newspapers about Mr. Wolf are true, he should be disbarred," said Mr. Poe. "Also, he would be amenable to prosecution under the criminal law for conspiring to defeat justice."

"I have been interested in the case ever since the confession of Mr. Keller, that he had gone to the police from Hart and Socolow in an effort to throw them off the trail of the fugitives, was printed. All along I have thought this situation required investigation by the Bar Association."

The matter is now in the hands of the grievance committee, and will be looked into.

Leach Declines to Comment.

Robert F. Leach, Jr., State's Attorney, was asked if he planned to lay before the grand jury information about Mr. Wolf entertaining Socolow

U. S. Inquiry Into Soviet Russia Is Suddenly Ended

WASHINGTON, Sept. 1.—Negotiations of an informal nature between the American and Soviet governments regarding the proposal to send an American technical commission to survey the economic situation in Russia, here it was closed. It was a thortogatively declared in official quarters today that this government was not willing to meet the terms fixed by the Soviet authorities, who asked for a reciprocal exchange of Russian and American investigation commissions.

Officials at the state department declined to give additional information regarding the proposed economic commission. They are understood to feel that Secretary Hughes' reply last May to the invitation of the Entente allies to participate in The Hague conference in June with relation to Russia sufficiently disclosed the attitude of this government.

There has been no change it was said in the position taken by Secretary Hughes at that time. It contemplated an inquiry into Russian economic conditions and after the failure of the Entente to reach an agreement with the Soviet authorities in the matter, the way was left open for individual inquiry.

It was understood that it was in conformity with a belief that something might be accomplished by an individual inquiry that the state department authorized Ambassador Houghton to confer informally at Berlin with Russian representatives.

The result was a counter proposal from the Soviet officials, which the state department regarded as quite unacceptable. While no statement on this point was obtainable it was represented that the objectionable proposal to make the proposed commission reciprocal, so that a Soviet commission should be admitted to the United States on the same terms as an American commission in Russia.

The corporation has ordered from the health department twenty-four pounds of barium carbonate or enough rat poison to wipe out a million of the rodents and will try to kill as many of the animals as possible. They are reported in increasing numbers up and down the river bank some of them being unusually large. The company also proposed to advocate the use of rat poison in the home of the mill personnel. The health department will cooperate with the mills in making the war of extermination effective. The poison can be secured at the city health office.

Abduction Cases Set for Sept. 15

Gus Dowdy and Heifman Clark who were to have been given hearings this morning on warrants charging abduction of the two girls, were granted a continuance until September 15th. Dowdy renewed his $500 bond but Clark went back to jail.

The police admitted this morning that neither Connie Lee nor Gertrude Williams, the young girls involved in this case have been found. Reports have been heard from Roxboro, N. C., Spray, N. C., and Durham, N. C., regarding their appearance there but none of these have been sifted definitely. The authorities appear to think that their continued absence from Danville is voluntary.

BUENOS AIRES, Sept. 2.—The steamship American Legion, in ramming and sinking the Argentine torpedo boat, yesterday afternoon, dock here for New York yesterday also struck several other small naval vessels. The American Legion, a transport, was in charge of a fleet of naval vessels, including the transport Patagonia, the transport Gaviota and the transport No. 2. None was seriously damaged.

The accident is said to have been due partly to misinterpretation of signals sent to the engine room of the American steamer and partly to the strong wind.

The number of casualties is not definitely known, but is reported that four or five persons on the torpedo boat were injured.

The American Legion was very slightly damaged, but she left shortly before midnight for New York.

The camp for boys, established a month ago near Toshes through the kindly offices of the Danville Rotarians, has closed for the summer. # SIX SHOTS HIT CAR

Henry County Man Here to See Lawyer

Claims Three Men Fired on Him Last Night Near Mt. Cross—Tells of Escape—Officers Did Shooting.

A Henry county man whose identity was not disclosed held a conference with an attorney this morning relative to an alleged episode which took place at about 8.30 o'clock last night on the Mount Cross road, when, he claims, his machine was shot at several times by three men who stepped into the road with shotguns from behind in automobile. The car bears six bullet holes to show for the encounter. Three are in the rear spare tire and the three others are through the curtain one of them breaking the windshield.

The story as told by the man is that when the three men stepped into the road and called out to him, he declined to pay any attention to them but instead put on speed and dashed by. The shots followed. None of them hurt him.

The man came to Danville today to discuss with a lawyer what course to pursue. He does not know if he was the victim of a robbery or if he was county officers waylaying a bootlegger. Until the identity of the men is learned it is unlikely that anything further can be done.

A short while later another man passed the same spot and found two Ford cars and a Chevrolet drawn up by the roadside. A group of men were standing there but the man who makes the report was not molested in any way.

Magistrate Ben W. Dodson was able to shed some additional light on the affair this afternoon. The man who was shot at was fired upon by law officers, according to fragment of information which Magistrate Dodson received. He said that he was told that the officers were laying in wait for an Essex car carrying liquor and that some shooting took place.

Magistrate Dodson admitted that he was in the raiding party near Mount Cross last night but he heard nothing of the shooting and apparently was at some point removed from the other officers.

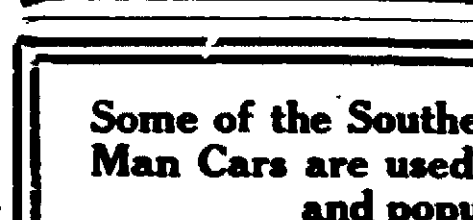

The magistrate gave the following names of men said to have taken part in the raid: Belt Mills, Ed. Mills, Deputies Austen and Oakes Ragsdale, Bond and himself. Mr. Dodson said that he had not heard the whole story of the encounter but from what he could learn the officers were trying to stop the car which they supposed to be the one they wanted and that the shot followed when the driver failed to halt.

Record Hailstorm Breaks In Augusta

STAUNTON, Va., Sept. 1.—Hail piled up to depths as great as 32 inches in low places and 20 inches during a severe storm that skirted Staunton late this afternoon. From a distance early this evening certain fields in the county looked as if there had been a heavy snow.

The Hopden orchard, four miles from Staunton, on the Middlebrook road, was greatly damaged, fruit being torn from trees. Two bridges over Lewis Creek were washed away, and this stream, which drains this city, overflowed its banks, and a half dozen business houses were flooded.

Cornfields and orchards also suffered, as well as gardens. The Staunton branch of the Richmond Dairy lost about 30 tons of coal in the flood, and water rushed into the Klotz Bros. junk yard and storage buildings, cellar and ground floors, damaging hides, wool and rags to about $500, it was estimated.

RAID NETS 9 GAMBLERS

Depending on a little bell to notify them of approach of blue coats, nine negroes, seated comfortably around a table in a snug little room, were having the time of their lives last night indulging in one of their most favorite pastimes—cards—when a trio of officers rushed in suddenly, broke up the proceedings and made ten arrests including the proprietor of the place. The raid was conducted by Sergeant J. H. Martin and Patrolmen O. W. Bates and O. S. Mayberry and proved successful, which has not been the case with them on several previous visits. The men arrested and charged with gambling were Horace Nichols, Anderson James, Ben Taylor, Berkeley Norton, Eugene Williams, Winstead Wilson, Matland Connelly, Wade Harvey and Frank Keen. Phil Brown was later placed under arrest on charge of operating an ill-governed house.

The scene of the raid was over a colored restaurant on Spring street. Local police officers had suspected the place as a gambling den, they claim, for some time, but the operators had been working some shrewd scheme in notifying the alleged gamblers and when a raid was conducted, nothing more than a crowd of men, sitting around smoking and talking, was found.

Although having failed on several attempts policemen decided to try their luck again last night. The above mentioned officers went there. Bates on entering the restaurant part, was just in time to see a negro woman dash suddenly for one of the tables. Before she could reach the table the officer had grabbed her. Putting up a scuffle she finally got close to the table and was apparently making efforts to place her hand at a certain point. Investigation revealed that an electric button was beneath the table top near the edge and it was this which was notifying the men above. Having been successful in preventing the negroes from turning in the alarm, the officers hurried upstairs and found the gamblers deeply interested in a game. Expressions of great surprise were noted when the officers entered the room. This room was so arranged in the center of the building that a light burning could not be seen from the street and for this reason, nothing suspicious looking could be seen from the outside.

The nine men pleaded guilty this morning and each paid fines totaling $17.45.

Two Are Killed In Train Wreck

CAPE GIRARDEAU, Mo., Sept. 1.—(By The Associated Press.)—A verdict of accidental death was returned by a coroner's jury tonight following the inquiry into the death of the two men known to have been killed in a wreck of a St. Louis and San Francisco railroad train, 35 miles north of here early today, when part of the train crashed through a bridge.

About fifty passengers are reported to have been injured, some seriously. The two known dead are: J. P. Warmath, of Gibson City, Tenn.

S. M. Yearta, of Hayti, Mo. Earlier reports indicated four had been killed, due to a duplication in checking. Among the injured is R. A. Smith, City, N. C.

Frisco officials announced after investigation the cause of the wreck that, in their opinion, the heavy rain of the night before had weakened the bridge. Prosecuting Attorney Frank A. Fenwick, of Perry county, in which the wreck occurred, announced, however, he had been informed that section hands had reported the trestle in an unsafe condition.

SATURDAY, SEPTEMBER 2, 1922
 RELEASE-ISM AN ISSUE AGAIN.

The victory of former-Governor Cole Blease in South Carolina's primary over T. G. McLeod and others seeking the nomination for governor, is something of a surprise. The fact that the former governor was even a candidate was not generally disseminated and it is even more of a shock that the Palmetto State voters still cherish a seeming affectionate regard for the political firebrand and his reactionary ideals. Most of us believed, and even hoped, that South Carolina had done once for all with Blease-ism. We are wrong, however, and the returns in last week's primary would rather indicate that the State is threatened with another period of loud executive domination. It is, however, nothing more than a threat. The South Carolina law calls for a "run-off," which will be held within the next few days to determine sentiment of the voters on the two candidates obtaining the highest vote in the first primary. McLeod, therefore, will be matched with Blease within a few days when the final test of strength will come.

There seems little doubt that the Blease element pulled its full strength in the first primary. The third candidate, G. K. Laney, was supported largely by anti-Blease people so that the combined vote of the followers of McLeod and Laney is more than apt to swamp Blease in his effort to stage a political comeback. It is also recognized that a large element of the anti-Blease vote has not been heard from in the first primary and that his victory in the first primary will stir the dormant vote to come out strongly and vote against Blease and the things he stands for. Blease is evidently still strong with a certain element of South Carolina's citizenship, but it is doubtful if in a contest in which the vote cannot be split three or four ways there will be a concentration for him. Ordinarily a political contest in South Carolina would fail to arouse interest in sister States and would, in fact, be regarded as nobody else's business except that of South Carolina. With Bleaseism an issue now, however, the South as a whole is interested for the things which Blease is in the habit of doing usually bring a reproach to Dixie land. Perhaps this best explains the chorus of hostile voices which are being heard all over the Southern States.

Scoop's Colyum

PLEASANT GAP, Sept. 1.—(Grapevine Wireless.)—Let us sit down together beside the evening lamp and consider the philosophy of Benjamin De Casseres, who writes about "The Exploited" in the Smart Set.

The practical man is one who capitalizes the dreams of poets and visions of mystics. The priest capitalizes the instinct of Diety and another mystic.

The statesman capitalizes the animal in man and evokes a war. The State capitalizes the sex-instinct and demands legal unions—for a fee. The demagogue and the legislator capitalize the revolutionary instinct. Victor Hugo and Charles Dickens capitalized the imagination of the people. Everything is capitalized; every great man is capitalized and turned into a joint stock company after his death.

Death itself is capitalized by the life insurance companies. We are capitalized from the cradle to the grave. No one of you can escape.

This seems to be immutable law of nature, that the big dog bosses the kennel. There is a good deal of bluff in it, too, but this is often effective in juggling the fate of others. We have a fine example of it in Washington, where a million-dollar labor lobby is bluffing Congress to a standstill, while a hundred million people face the hazard of paralyzed industry, cold and hunger.

Democracy is on trial, we are facing the supreme test of citizenship; the issue must be met! Our boasted 100 per cent. Americanism has been called—the sheep and the goats are at the parting of the ways.

If winter comes, you can chase yourself to keep warm!

Berries.

his house with his rifle loaded. He wasn't sure whether Kincheoloe, the other man, was coming back from the Rock to his house.

"What are you doing?" she asked, suddenly shivering. He put his hands steadily upon her arm. "I got you into it," he accused himself. "You know I'd no idea what it would do to you, or I'd turned back yesterday."

"I think there's surely something to be found out in this," Barney said while Ethel stated her determination to go there at once. "Bagley's back there; and Marcellus Clarke has his office there."

"And my uncle Lucas is there—or he was when he sent that telegram last night warning grandfather. But of course, he'll be with grandfather. I'll learn nothing from him, if he can help it."

She gave him her hand in good-by. CHAPTER IX
 A train bore Ethel away from Resurrection Rock and from Barney Loutrell, the girl debated in her mind the task which confronted her on her arrival and vaguely wished that cousin Agnes, Mrs. Oliver Cullen as she had been known in Chicago society before her tragic disappearance from the tormented Galantic, were alive to aid her.

About Agnes there had been something of a mystery as well as an attraction to Ethel. Cousin Agnes, first came to Chicago as a girl, she told those who asked her. Previously she had lived in a small town and no one—not even the many newspaper interviewers—got farther than that.

It was plain that, not long before her employment in the Cullen offices, she had passed through some extraordinary experience which had tremendously sapped her vitality. She had endured some frightful ordeal which temporarily had downed her but had not beaten her.

Many men offered themselves to take up her battle for her. But only Oliver Cullen, after his first or second attempt, succeeded in offering himself as a champion.

John died and Oliver "the damned weakling" and his upstart wife, who had been a stenographer, claimed from Lucas and his stronger, far more able sons, the control of the Cullen corporations while ownership old John's stock remained.

Lucas fought and blustered; but Oliver asserted the control; or, rather, Agnes did. For Lucas and his sons did not remain long in doubt regarding the force with which they had to deal; nor did outsiders remain ignorant.

So they grined and bore it while they watched Oliver gradually sink into invalidism and year follow year with Agnes children.

There was an old contract, which Lucas, Senior, had safely locked away, by which he and his brother had bound themselves that in the event of either of them or their sons dying without issue, the holdings of the deceased would pass to the survivor.

In September, 1913, those conditions seemed completely fulfilled; for Agnes, who had gone heart and soul into war work, sailed aboard a ship which was torpedoed; and she was lost.

The news reached Oliver on the eighteenth; and on the twenty-second, he died.

But Agnes, as though to torment Lucas even after her death, had passed on in the most annoying way possible. Though it was obvious that she had drowned, yet no one actually had seen her drown.

Since she was not legally dead, her home remained open. Mrs. Wain, her housekeeper, and her servants were at the house, which they were keeping in order as though Mrs. Oliver Cullen were away merely on a visit.

It was to cousin Agnes' home that Ethel went after an unsuccessful attempt to discover any knowledge of Bagley.

Marcellus Clark, she learned, was in Europe and no one at his office could disclose information of Bagley or the reasons why the frightened steward had been sent to the lone house on Resurrection Rock.

But a shock awaited her when she entered her cousin's home and was greeted by the housekeeper.

year, but was defeated. His defeat, by Carmel Thompson, a "regular," was taken as an endorsement of the administration.

A hit dozen politicians do the legislating for the nation," he said.

"Contrary to popular belief, Congress has ceased to be a deliberative body. Bills are brought in under a special rule which altogether shuts off debate and the right of amendment, or confines such action to those selected by the 'leaders.' No member was allowed to offer an amendment on the floor to the bill unless he was a member of the ways and means committee that framed it. This was one of the reasons why I voted against it."

"The bonus bill, imposing a burden of five billions upon people of the country, was passed under a rule which prohibited all amendments and only four hours of debate. Under such conditions the man who pretends to do his own thinking and really has any constructive ideas has no place in Congress."

"It is true he may essay the role of an obstructionist, but even that he can only accomplish a further waste of time by forcing futile roll calls. No member can get a bill before the House unless the rules committee permits it. Not even an investigation of the most flagrant abuses can be considered by the House unless this same rules committee will allow it. This is the Woodruff resolution concerning war contracts is still fresh in the people's mind. In other words, a member is perfectly helpless, unless he is willing to play the game of the leaders, who of course, represent the will of the administration."

The Republican party of Ohio, but for the primaries and the state convention, gave a blanket endorsement to the administration policies. I therefore consider that I have no right to obstruct or criticize those policies until the people at the next election pass judgment upon them."

"Therefore, there is nothing that I can do as a congressman, except to try to arouse postmasters, and I have no conscious genius for that kind of thing. All of the 'important' routine business of my district is likely to arise before the expiration of my term, and has been disposed of with a close these up I shall get out for good."

"Being just an ordinary successful business man, and used to getting results without undue delay, I have no patience of the statesman, and I want to get back to useful work."

AKRON, O., Sept. 2.—(To those who are urging me to reconsider my purpose to retire from Congress, I wish to say this. I am convinced that I am wholly out of harmony with the spirit and purpose that now prevail at Washington.)

This was the explanation of his announced intention of quitting Congress, given in an interview here by Representative Charles L. Knight, member from the 14th Ohio district, now serving his first term.

Knight, who is publisher of the Akron (O.) Beacon Journal, has been prominent in Republican party politics in recent years. He bolted the regular Republican ranks to support Theodore Roosevelt at the end of the last administration. He was offered the nomination for Congress in 1912 by both Roosevelt and Taft.

In 1914 he was named a member of the Republican state central committee. He was a delegate to the national convention in 1916. Knight was a candidate for governor of Ohio in the August primaries this

The Voice On The Wire

By Zoe Beckley.

FRED, salesman for the Gypsy Motor Company, and his bride, CONNIE, have become reconciled after a quarrel over a gaudy New York apartment Fred has picked as their home. Connie agrees to live in the apartment because Fred says it will help him in business.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY.

WITHIN two weeks the Dales were established in their three-room home in Cleopatra court. The excitement of buying furnishings was a merciful opiate for the ache in Connie's heart over the shattered dream of the colonial cottage with apple-green blinds. The ache had subsided, however, from a fierce pain to a sort of wistful resignation.

"It's for Fred," she would tell herself over and over, drowning the promptings of rebellion with the thought that alone makes mating possible.

Despite all, the shiny-new little home came to have an appeal of its own and Connie bustled about her miniature housekeeping like a canary in a sunny breeze. Connie had always loved "old-fashioned things," and now she realized how skillfully invention and modern design combined the charm of the old with the convenience of the new—and housekeeping became an exciting little game. Electric toasters, percolators, irons, washing machines, all were like toys to her.

Fred plunged into his new selling territory with characteristic single-mindedness and was reaping his reward. Life ran on blithely for some weeks. They used to part each morning at the elevator, Connie following her liege lord as though to the gate of the cottage. One day she went with him, bound for some shopping, as the elevator stopped two flights below there entered a strikingly efficient looking woman of the purely business type. Her tailored clothes fitted as crisply as her mind, and her face was devoid of artifice, handsome, but so expressive of the business mood that it lacked a little in personal appeal. She seemed oblivious of every other passenger in the car.

The Dales were haunted with a sense of having seen her before. They whispered a comment or two when she left the car and Fred asked the doorman who she was.

"Her? Don't you know? Why, she's Hanna Fuller, the cat's whiskers of all bond salesmen. Gosh, she knows Broad' and Wall like I know my tobacco bag. Funny part of it is how she looks when she's off business and dressed for the play! You'd never know her. She's got a Ziegfeld Polly girl looking like Mother Hubbard!"

Simultaneously to the Dales came recollection. She was the "painted lady" they had encountered on their first visit.

"Some woman!" remarked Fred with real admiration. Two in one. Business and pleasure. Day and Night. And got the class to mix 'em well."

Fred had a chance to test his conviction that very evening. He and Connie were just finishing dinner served proudly from the shining kitchen when the phone bell rang. Connie answered.

"This is Hanna Fuller," said a leisurely, self-assured voice, smooth, interested, seductive. "Forgive my breaking in, won't you, but I understand Mr. Dale is selling the Gypsy car. I'm interested. Will you ask him to come down and have a few minutes' talk with me?"

possibly few who would want them. But how many there are who could give young people a start rather than a responsibility.

"The known couples whose marriage was practically doomed from the start, all because their well-meaning relatives and friends gave them such expensive wedding gifts. They couldn't take them to the sort of a home they could afford, and couldn't afford the sort of a home they ought to go to, and trouble began."

"From now on, every gift I ever give is going to be a useful one, no matter how small it is."

Action Is Considered One of Most Drastic Steps Yet Taken in a Strike Situation

While Mr. Daugherty, Blackburn Esterline, his assistant, and Charles Cline, United States district attorney, all refused to comment on the possible effect of the injunction, Mr. Daugherty said his future moves will be governed entirely by the actions of the persons involved.

In his presentation before the court, Mr. Daugherty reviewed the efforts at mediation, particularly President Harding's attempts to end the strike. He called attention to the fact that the railroad labor board is an agency of the government and that the president issued a proclamation calling upon the strikers to return to work, obey the board's decisions, and in any event not to interfere with the transportation service or with men willing to enter or continue in service.

The defendants in refusing to accept the labor board's decision cutting wages, he said, have "repudiated the labor board and the government of the United States, in contempt."

Calling attention to the declaration of the president before Congress that the government can have no chart for its course except the law, the attorney general continued:

"There are statutes forbidding conspiracy to hinder interstate commerce; there are laws to assure the highest possible safety to railway service. It is my purpose to invoke these laws, civil and criminal, against all offenders alike."

Legal safeguarding against such menace in the future, he said, must be worked out when a change has been given to appraise the entire situation. "We must re-assert the doctrine that in this republic the first obligation and the first allegiance of every citizen, high or low, is to his government," Mr. Daugherty said, "and to hold that government to be the just and unchallenged sponsor for public welfare, and the liberty, security and right of all its citizens. No matter what clouds may gather, no matter what storms may ensue, no matter what hardships may attend or what sacrifice may be necessary, government by law must and will be sustained."

Expressing his resolve to use all the power of the government to maintain transportation and sustain the right of men to work, the attorney general, he said, did not appear as a representative of the government but representing the people of the United States. Expressing the government's friendliness toward all labor, he continued:

"The government of the United States is not to be taken for granted. It is not to be taken for granted that it can perform such functions as can be performed in lawful America. Never while the labor unions limit their activities to legitimate acts and lawful purposes, it is injurious to society, at least while it is in the country, that I can speak for the government of the United States, shall a blow be struck at them. But it may be understood that so long and to the extent that I can speak for the government of the United States, I will use the power of the government of the United States within my control to prevent the labor unions of the country from destroying the open shop. When a man in the country is permitted to engage in lawful toil, whether he belongs to a union or not, with full protection and without interruption, the death knell to liberty is sounded and anarchy will surely be organized."

"The right to work in this country is as sacred as the right to be employed to work, if a man is not disposed to do so, and every man must be free to secure his choice of life. He said the time had not yet come for taking over of the roads by the government."

"The dispute between the employees and the employer is not involved in the proceeding," he said, "we have passed beyond this point. A governmental body entitled to recognition and obedience has decided that dispute. I am not taking sides between the disputants at this time as an advocate of either. It so happens in this instance that the railroads are willing to render the service the government requires they shall render. They are endeavoring to furnish transportation and are offering salaries. It is alleged in this bill, and by acts of violence are antagonizing and opposing the government of the United States."

broken; shall society be disorganized; shall prosperity and all labor cease and the poor be in want because employees and employees engaged in interstate commerce, obligated to the government and to the people of the United States, by a greater obligation than that which rests upon any other set of men in the country, be cause of a dispute between them refuse to obey the law? No! The answer is by government, that if they cannot agree, there will be given the privilege and protection of performing this service, who will agree with the government and obey the laws of government."

The action of the federal government came as a bomb shell in Judge Wilkerson's court, as the attorney general entered the court room an audible tremor of surprise filled the marble-walled hall and the first indication of the magnitude of the proceeding was given. It had not been known by more than a few assistants that the attorney general was in Chicago.

District Attorney Cline walked directly to the bench and announced almost simultaneously with the formal convening of court by the clerk, that he sought to bring action of the United States of America, against the railway employees' department of the American Road & Transportation Builders' Association.

With the sentence yet unfinished the room was alive with the activity of a prodded wasps' nest. Newspaper men ran empty handed for telephones, court officials moved frantically to restore order, and waiting attorneys and witnesses leaned forward in the benches they had for hours occupied in monotonous indifference, with alert interest.

As the reading of the bill of complaint continued, the court through grew, and the eager interest of the crowd advanced to dramatic excitement and expectancy, sustained to the climax which came in the concluding sentence of Attorney General Daugherty's plea.

Fifty one typed pages making up the petition were read by Solicitor Esterline, following which the attorney general took his position before the judge to make his plea for the petition.

The attorney general spoke deliberately, often pondering on words or phrases, as if, it seemed, in hope that their utterance might not be necessary, then giving in to the urge that no other cause remained.

With the signing of the injunction, the legal array of the federal government withdrew and those who entered with the calling of the case of Black vs. Mahoney, the calm of normalcy returned to the scene as quickly as it had departed.

"It can hardly be assumed that the federal court had intended to restrain, or had restrained those lawful acts necessarily involved in carrying on the legitimate work of labor organizations, some or all of whose members are engaged in a legally conducted strike to accomplish lawful purposes. Such acts including peaceful picketing, as has been repeatedly and recently held to be lawful by the supreme court of the United States cannot be assumed to come within the prohibitions of the restraining order entered by Judge Wilkerson. If a strike of railway employees and its peaceful conduct was an unlawful proceeding it cannot be assumed that the attorney general would have waited two months to proceed against the strikers; that the president of the United States would have held conferences with law breakers and proposed that the law breakers whom they represented should return to work under terms which they afterwards accepted and which the railway executives rejected. Therefore, we assume that the right of the railway employees to acknowledge and to continue a lawful strike in a lawful manner until a satisfactory settlement is made."

LUCCO GUNTER DEAD

GREENVILLE, S. C., Sept. 1.—Lucco Gunter, 43, head of the department of education at Furman University, and formerly state supervisor of rural schools, died at his residence here this afternoon after a prolonged illness of cancer of the spine. His condition had been critical for several weeks.

Band Concert At Ball Park This Afternoon

After a great twelve inning victory over the Twins yesterday, the Tobaccoists will again meet that team this afternoon at Stonewall Jackson park for the second game of the series. Pitcher "Cudd" Harris has been selected to do the pitching and Clancy will have to make a good selection to beat Harris, if he is going good.

Then too, the Coast Artillery band will be on hand and concerts will be given starting at 3:30 o'clock and lasting throughout the game or until about 6 o'clock. Yesterday was a great day at the park and with the band concerts today, another large crowd is anticipated.

It was announced last night that this afternoon's game will begin 15 minutes earlier, or to be specific at 4 o'clock sharp. This change in time was made in order that the game might be over in time to give the players time to prepare for the big dance which is to be given at Park Springs tonight for their benefit.

Abbott has signed Ellington, a new left handed pitcher. It was also stated that Lefty Frank Graham, now playing in the Eastern Carolina League will arrive in Danville the early part of next week and will bring with him two pitchers and a first baseman. The local management has been in communication with Graham and it was arranged for him to report here at the close of that league's season with players for the above mentioned positions. With Pitcher Twombly leaving in a day or so, Danville will be in need of pitchers. Mc-

Millan, first sacker, is suffering from an injured side and it is not thought that he will be able to get in the game again for some time. Abbott has been playing that position for the past week. Graham will wear a Tobaccoist uniform next season. Little need be said as to his reputation as a moundman.

ROUGH COATS ARE MODISH

A herringbone on the back is worth a dozen on the plate this season. Women have taken over all women's stuffs in this pattern—formerly monopolized by men—and are making fall and winter coats of them.

These coats are of the rough and ready variety. Some of them are made with voluminous overcoats to shield one from the "cauld" blast. Some have sleeves set in several inches below the shoulder. Others have raglan sleeves.

They are made with collars that button tight under the chin, are severely notched, tailored fashion, or are slightly draped in the back and roll open in front.

The materials are all herringbone weaves, checked and plaid wool velours, plaid backed coatings, wool flannel and moles.

Boy Bandit Dies;
Smiling To End

ATLANTA, Ga., Sept. 1.—Maintaining his stoicism to the last and with a smile on his lips as the black cap was adjusted preparatory to springing the trap under him, Frank B. Dupre, 19-year-old bandit, paid the death penalty at the Fulton county jail here for the murder of Irby C. Walker, private detective, December 15, last. The trap was sprung at 2:04 o'clock and sixteen minutes later the youth was pronounced dead.

The scenes attending the execution of Dupre were described by jail officials as the most dramatic ever witnessed by them. Outside the jail, the streets on three sides were blocked with persons eager to get a glimpse of the proceedings. Even the tops of buildings nearby were occupied by men, women and children. Police reserves were called out to keep order inside the prison walls. Dupre probably was more composed than any of the officials, witnesses or fellow-prisoners.

The youthful bandit was engaged in religious services when the fall of the death trap for Luke McDonald, negro, convicted of the murder of a negro woman, could be heard throughout the jail. He paid no attention to the sound which within the hour was to mean his own end. He continued in prayer until fifteen minutes of the hour set for his execution, when unfalteringly he started for the gallows five stories above.

Upon reaching the death chamber Dupre stopped and looked out a window.

"That's some crowd, isn't it?" he said to his brother, Joe Dupre.

He then turned out his accompaniment below and waved to them shouting:

"Goodbye."

A deputy sheriff called his attention to Betty Andrews, the sweetheart for whom he refused the New Kasser jersey story and killed Walker. She was in a cell two doors below, her face pressed closely against the bars of the window. She became hysterical at the sight of the condemned youth, who shook his head.

"Goodbye, Betty. I want you to be a good girl. Won't you?"

His words were drowned in the cries of the crowds below.

"Be good, Betty. Goodbye," Dupre repeated again and again. Then as the crowd became quiet:

"You going to meet me in heaven, ain't you Betty?" the bandit shouted at his sweetheart.

"Yes," was the reply.

Dupre turned to a deputy sheriff and asked:

"Well, you all ready?"

The deputy, too full of emotion to reply, led the boy away to the gallows.

"God bless you all," Dupre shouted as he waved a last farewell.

The condemned youth led the procession to the gallows, surveyed his surroundings and then asked his spiritual advisers to sing.

"A Mother's Prayer has followed me," Dupre's last audible words, uttered as the blackcap was being adjusted over his head.

"Please brush back my hair."

The suit in which Dupre was hanged was the same one worn by him on the day of his crime.

The execution of Dupre brought to an end one of the most determined legal battles ever waged in the history of Georgia criminal courts. All other efforts having failed to stay execution a final appeal was made to President Harding yesterday, but he replied that he was without authority to intervene in the case.

The crime for which Frank B. Dupre was convicted was described by Atlanta police officials as one of the most daring and sensational hold-ups in the history of the city. Entering the jewelry store of Nat Kiser, in the downtown section of Peachtree street, in the heart of the business quarter when the street was crowded with Christmas shoppers, he the afternoon of December 21, 1921, the debonair youth asked to see a tray of diamonds.

Selecting a gem valued by the jeweler at $2,500 Dupre, the inexperienced boy, appearing much younger than his 19 years, shot his way out of the store, killing Irby C. Walker, a private detective, who attempted to block his exit.

Dashing down the busy sidewalk and into the corridor of a hotel, a few doors away, just as many of the luncheon guests were leaving, he encountered B. Graham West, city controller of Atlanta, who unaware of the reason for the boy's haste, attempted to stop the fleeing bandit. Mr. West was shot in the neck and lingered between life and death for weeks before recovering.

After shooting the city official Dupre vanished, and escaped to Chattanooga in an automobile. There he pawned the diamond stolen in Atlanta for less than a third of its value, and started on a roving journey that carried him to Norfolk, Va., and later to Detroit where he was captured.

Dupre escaped capture in the Virginia city by a few minutes through the friendly tip of a young woman at the counter of a telegraph office.

By the time Dupre reached Detroit the money he had obtained on the pawned diamond was running low.

Writing back to the Chattanooga pawnbroker, according to what he later said was a prearranged scheme, he asked for further advances on the diamond. Instead of sending the money, the pawnbroker notified the Chattanooga police and furnished them with a description of Dupre.

Armed with the description of Dupre, a detective from the Tennessee city departed for Detroit, timing his arrival with the pawnbroker's reply, and was waiting for the youth when he went to the postoffice.

Ambling aimlessly into the building where he expected to get a letter which he hoped would enable him to cross the river into Canada, the youthful robber was taken. He made no show of resistance. On the other hand, officers said, he seemed to be glad the thing was over.

Dupre made a complete confession of the crime, attributing his troubles to the influence of bad associates. He was brought here and given a speedy trial, being convicted of murder on January 29 and sentenced to hang March 15. He maintained a stoic indifference to his fate throughout the trial.

In the meantime his counsel filed a motion for a new trial which was heard in Macon, Ga., on March 16 and denied. A later appeal to the supreme court of Georgia likewise was denied and on July 28 he was re-sentenced to be hanged September 1.

CONSIDERING EARLY
OPENING MARKET GOOD

TARBORO, Sept. 1.—The Tarboro tobacco market for the eight days closing Friday, August 26, has sold 36,000 pounds at an average of 23 cents in the two houses run on the loose leaf plan. This is considered very good for this market, considering the early opening. On account of the tobacco being sold entirely on the co-operative marketing plan at some of the nearby towns Tarboro is getting tobacco from a larger territory than in former years, and the warehousemen feel very much encouraged over the prospects. All the large companies have buyers here and the farmers are generally satisfied with the prices. The co-operative house opened here last Thursday and there is general satisfaction among the signers over the way their tobacco is handled.

HAIL DAMAGE IN IREDELL

RALEIGH, Sept. 1.—Tobacco is far to good in the Piedmont plateau. It has poor condition in the northeastern part of the State, where the acreage is small. The southeastern section reports about the same conditions as the plateau—fair to good. Hail caused heavy losses to tobacco in Iredeed county during the past week. Curing is well advanced. Some farmers are putting their tobacco on the market and find the prices are fair to good, as compared with last year. Much of the tobacco is of good quality.

EXPECT DEFINITE

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 1.—Despite the fact that no word came from the operators, strong hope was expressed by United Mine Workers and others interested in the situation that tomorrow will see definite action taken to bring to a speedy end the anthracite coal suspension which today entered upon its sixth month.

Efforts made to sound out the employers as to whether there was any response to their statement of last night that only a "public mandate" could impel them to grant the hard coal diggers the old wage scale beyond April 1, next year, were without avail. The operators scattered after yesterday's conference to meet again here tomorrow. There was no information from Washington as to whether a "public mandate" might be expected from congressional sources. The miners held no meeting today.

CLOSING OF U. S.

CONSULATE HOLDS UP MANY SHIPS

NEW CASTLE-ON-TYNE, Sept. 1.—(By The Associated Press.)—New Castle shipping and business circles today are in a state bordering on consternation, owing to the closing of the American consulate. Numerous ships of various nationalities already are held up, lacking consular bills of health, shipments of merchandise for the United States cannot go forward without consular invoices, and many persons desiring to travel to America are clamoring for visas, which under the regulations must be obtained from the consul in the district in which they reside.

In the meantime, Consul Slater is working behind closed doors, cleaning up the affairs of the consulate, preparatory to leaving for his new post at Corunna, Spain, while Herbert Shaw, secretary of the New Castle Chamber of Commerce, is urgently pressing the British authorities at London to make some sort of arrangement whereby business can proceed.

TRESTLE COLLAPSED

CAPE GIRARDEAU, Mo., Sept. 1.—(By The Associated Press.)—Four persons were killed, eight injured seriously and 23 slightly in the wreck of St. Louis-St. Francis passenger train No. 805 near Wittenberg, 36 miles north of here today, according to a check-up this afternoon. The train, en route from St. Louis to Memphis, Tennessee, was wrecked when a trestle collapsed as it passed over it.

Several of the injured were members of the Missouri national guard who had been stationed at Moberly, Mo., strike duty. None of the dead had been identified tonight. They were chair car passengers. Several of the coaches crashed into a creek. While recent heavy rains are said to have weakened the trestle, which was 139 feet long, Frank A. Fenwick, prosecuting attorney of Perry county stated he was informed that section hands had reported the trestle as in an unsafe condition several months ago and that he would make a thorough investigation. Frisco officials vigorously denied the trestle was unsafe.

RALEIGH OPENS TUESDAY

RALEIGH, Sept. 1.—Auction tobacco warehouses of Raleigh will open September 5, along with other warehouses of the old belt and heavy offerings are looked for.

The Raleigh Warehouse will be operated, as it was last year, by J. A. Warren & Sons, while the Wake Warehouse, nearby, will be operated by N. B. M. Tuck Company.

Approximately three million pounds of tobacco were sold on the Raleigh market last year and as an opener for Raleigh as a tobacco market this was regarded as highly successful. Prices were good, and the fact that Raleigh is a center to which most growers are said to come, helped some to make the market popular. A continuation of the popularity is expected for this year, with an increasing sale of the leaf.
